Dr. Heather Bell is a GP Principal based in Greenisland, Carrickfergus, Northern Ireland, with a longstanding special interest in diabetes. She graduated with honours from Queen's University Belfast in 2004 and joined the Primary Care Diabetes Society (PCDS) as a committee member in 2019, where she now serves as Co-Chair of the Northern Ireland committee. She sits on the Northern Ireland Advisory Committee for Diabetes UK and the Northern Trust Insulin Safety Group, and in 2018 contributed to the Diabetes Elective Care Reform Group working to transform diabetes care in primary care. A frequent speaker at national conferences with an interest in diabetes research, she is also passionate about education – working as a GP Trainer and a Faculty Registered Trainer in family planning – and maintains a special interest in women's health.
